Stone Soup

Retold by Monica Hughes
Illustrated by Alison Forsythe

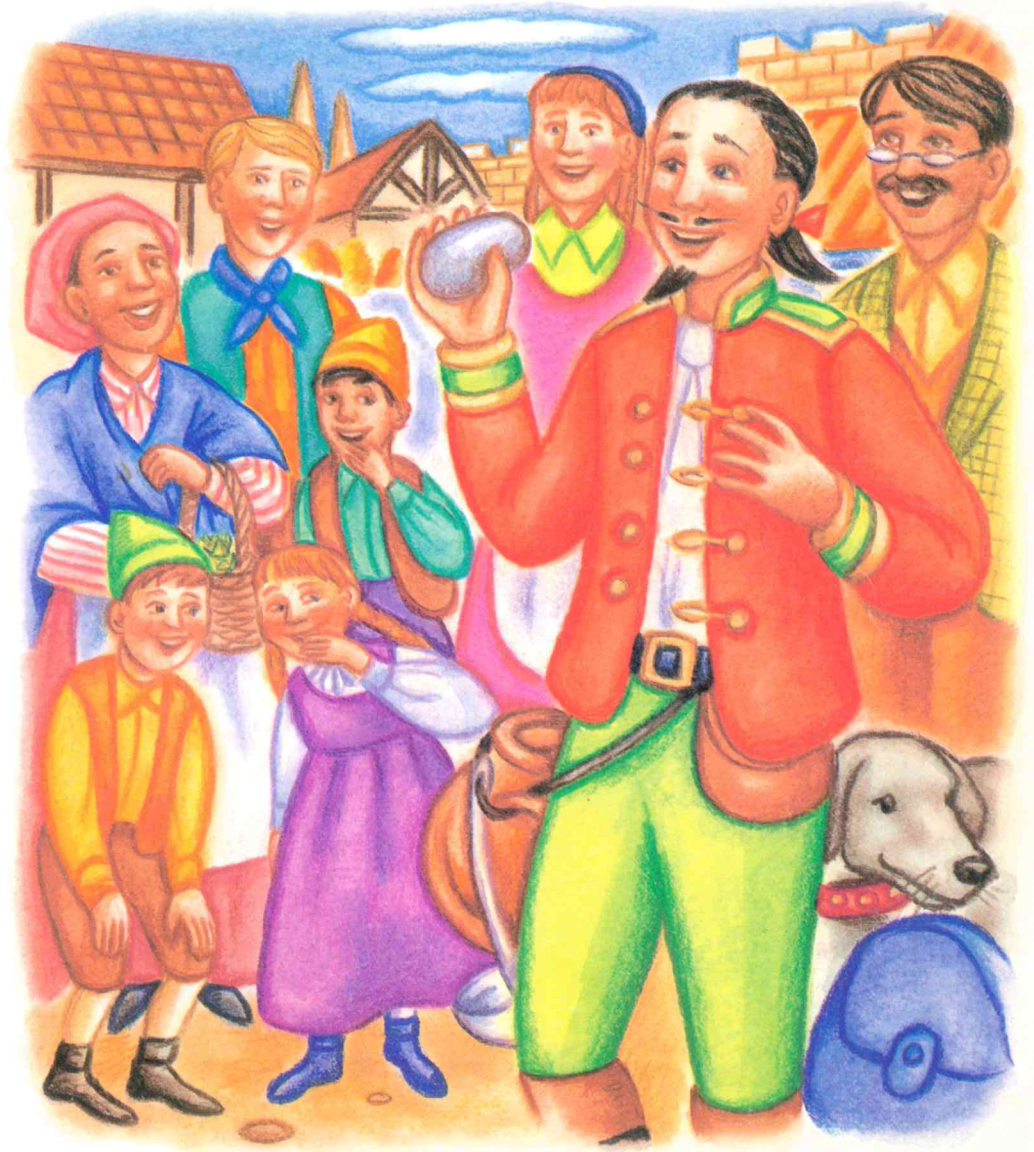

One day, a soldier came to town.

'I can make soup with that stone,'
said the soldier.

Everybody laughed.

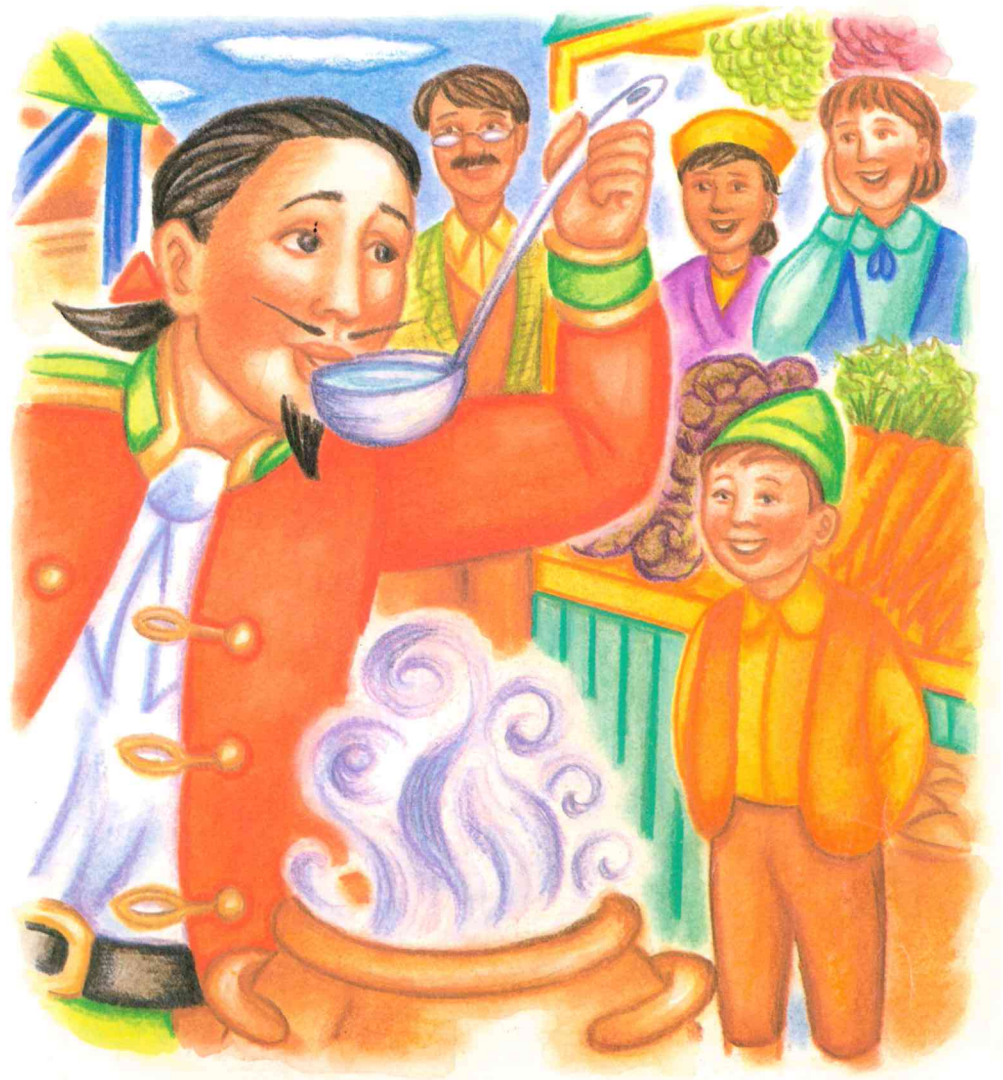

The soldier put the stone in his pot.

He put the pot on the fire.
He put some water in the pot.

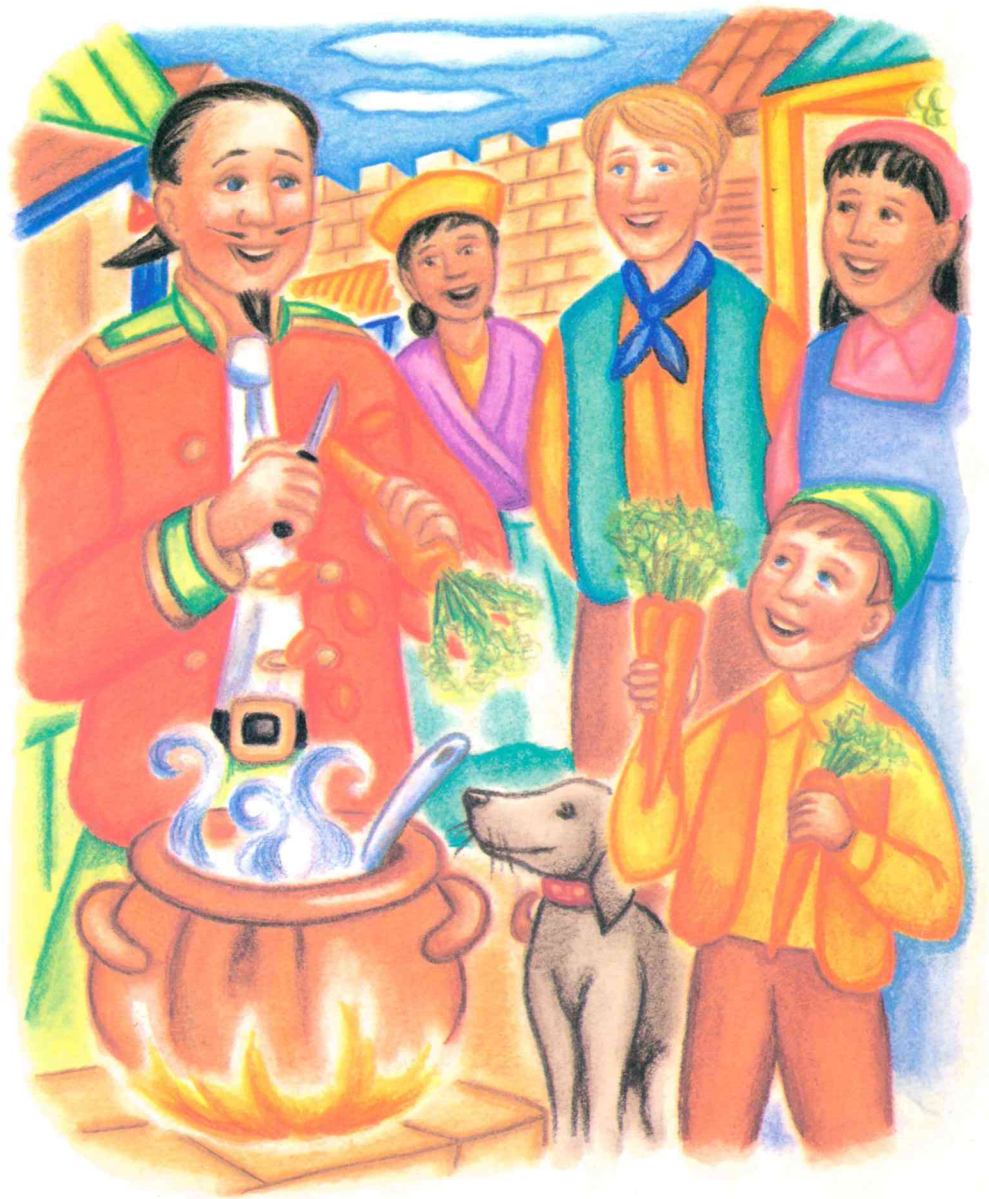

The soldier had some soup.

'Mmm,' he said. 'It's good.
But if you gave me some of your carrots,
it would be very good!'

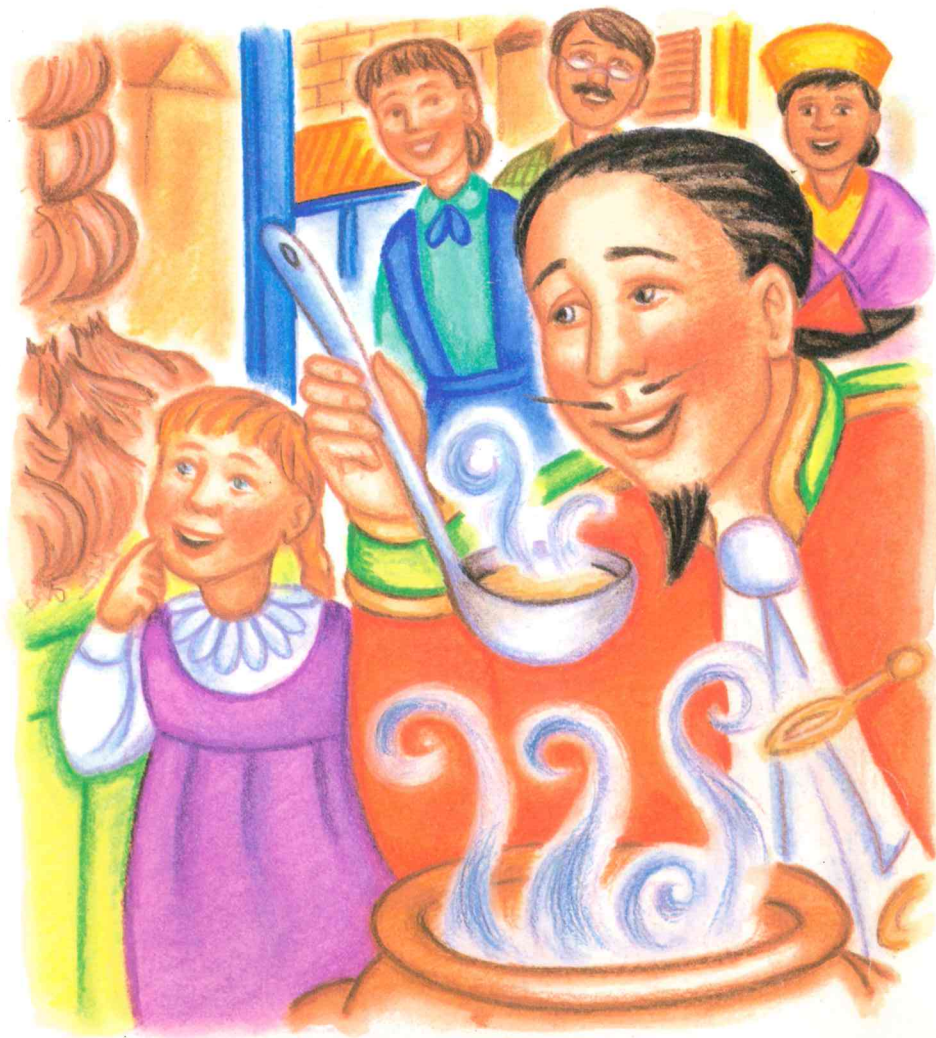

A boy gave him some carrots.

The soldier put them in the soup.

The soldier had some soup.

'Mmm,' he said. 'It's good.
But if you gave me some of your onions,
it would be very good!'

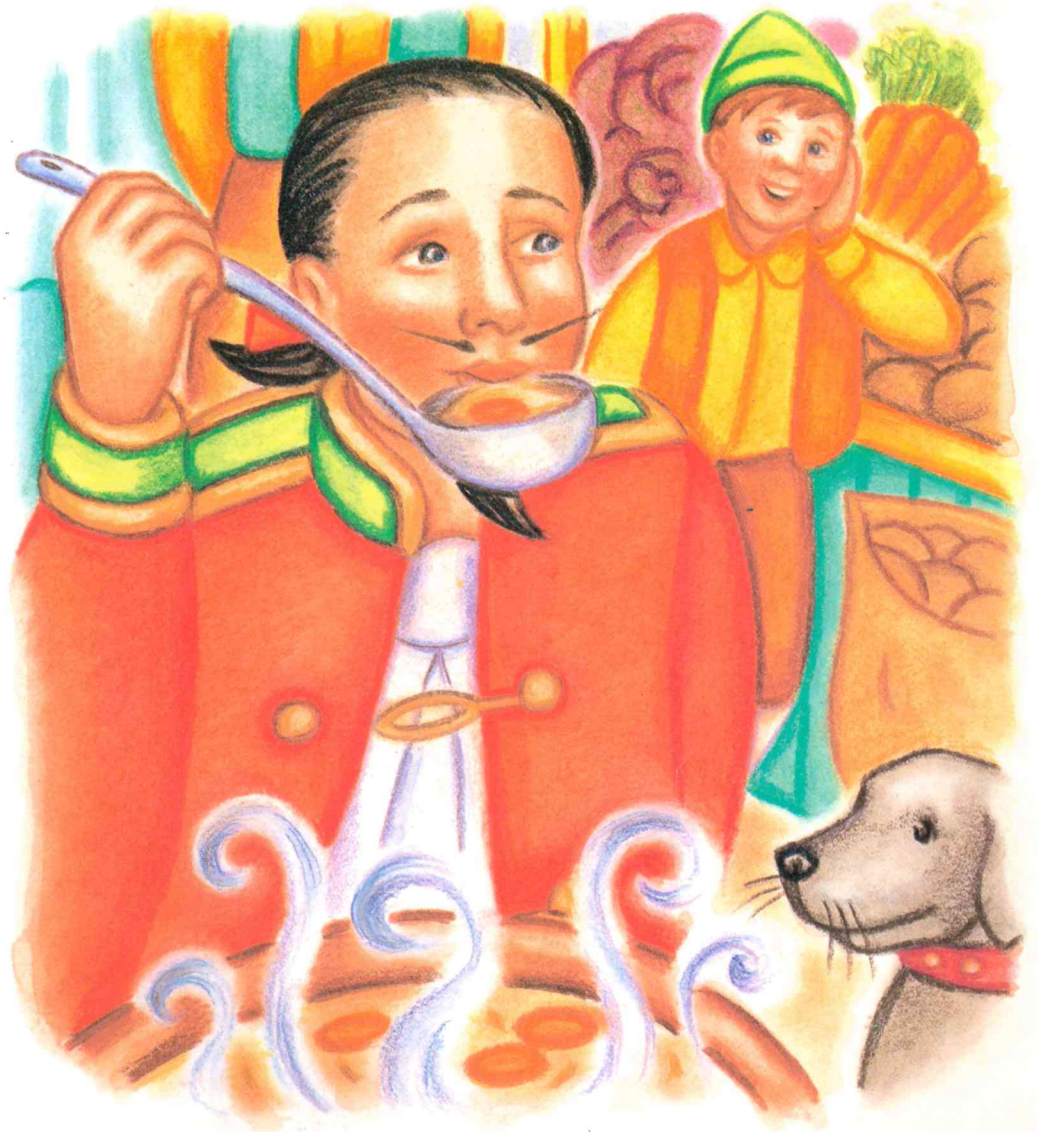

A girl gave him some onions.

The soldier put them in the soup.

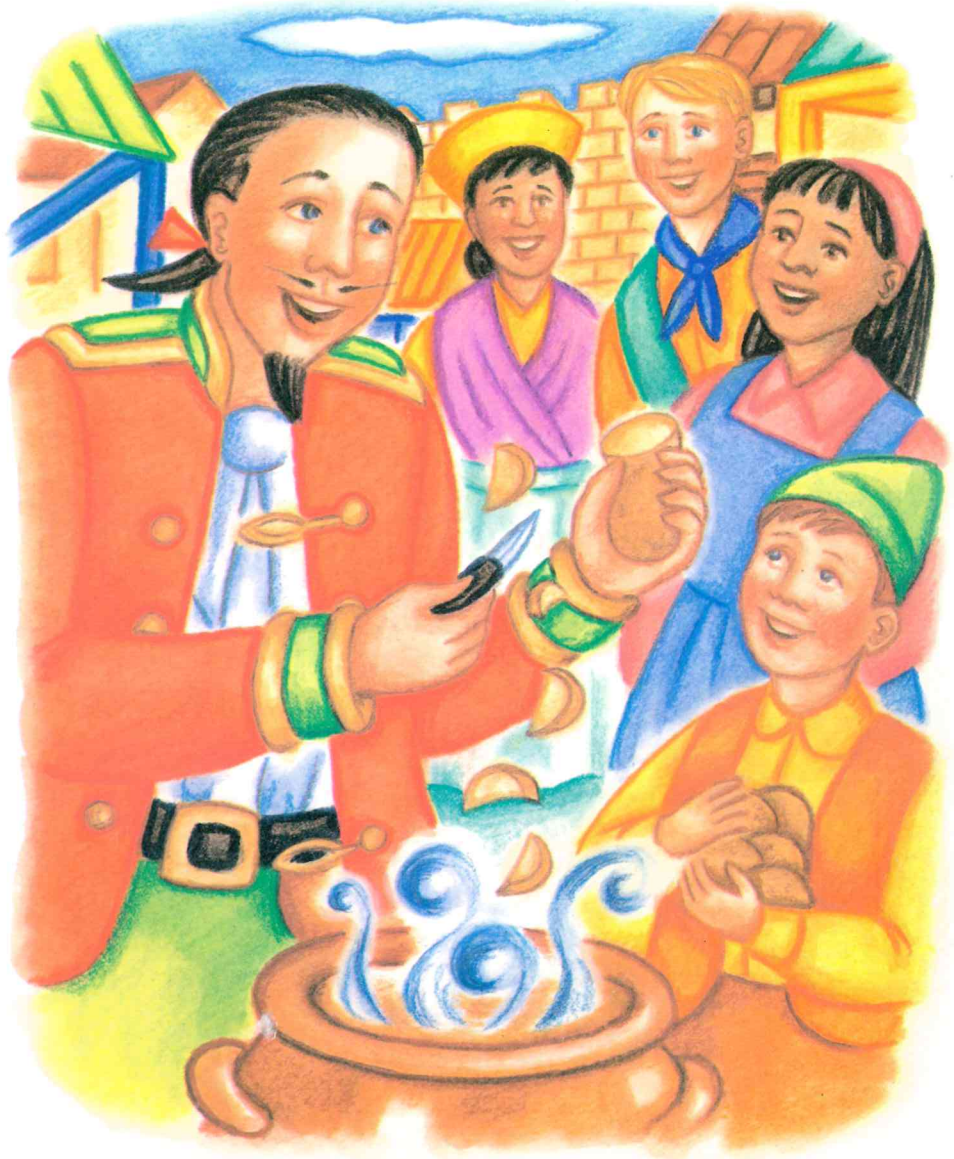

The soldier had some soup.

'Mmm,' he said. 'It's good.
But if you gave me some of your potatoes,
it would be very good!'

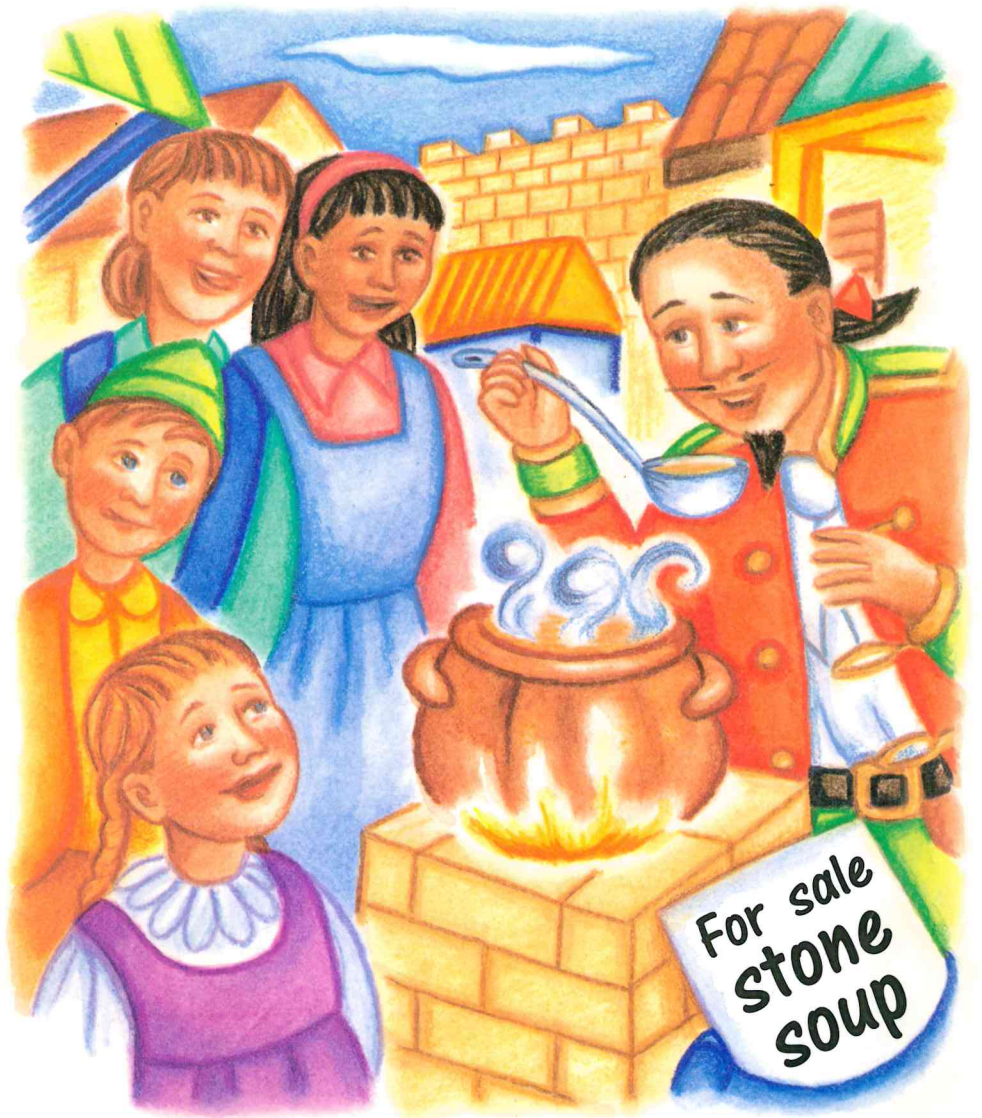

The boy gave him some potatoes.

The soldier put them in the soup.

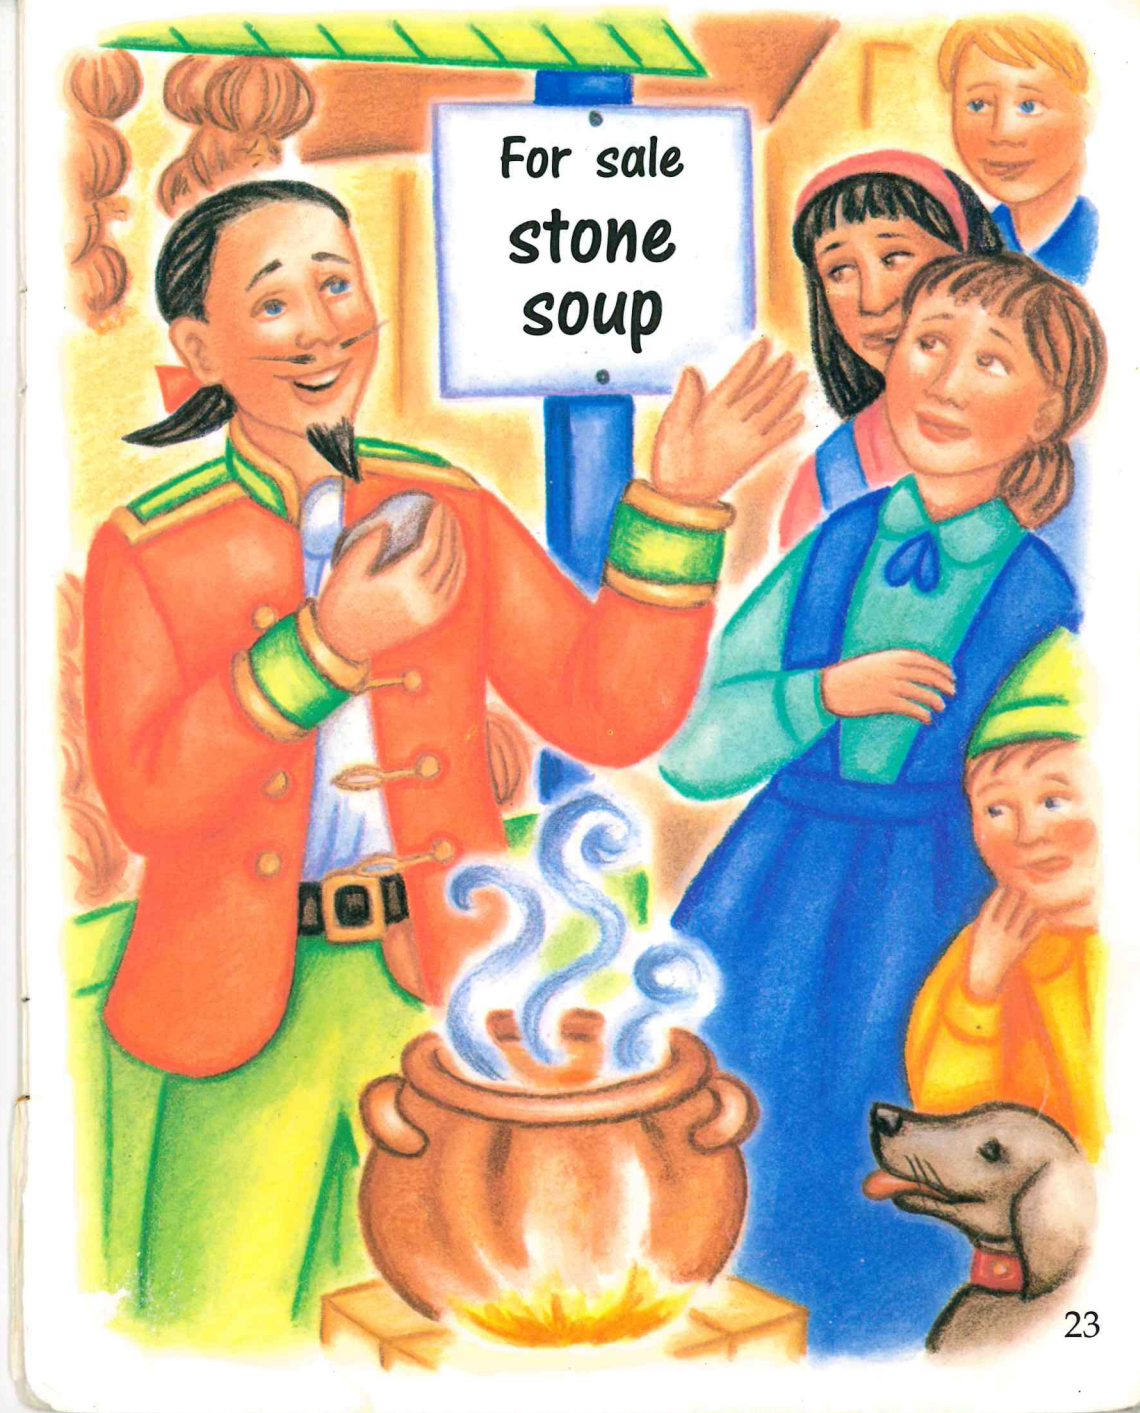

The soldier had some soup.

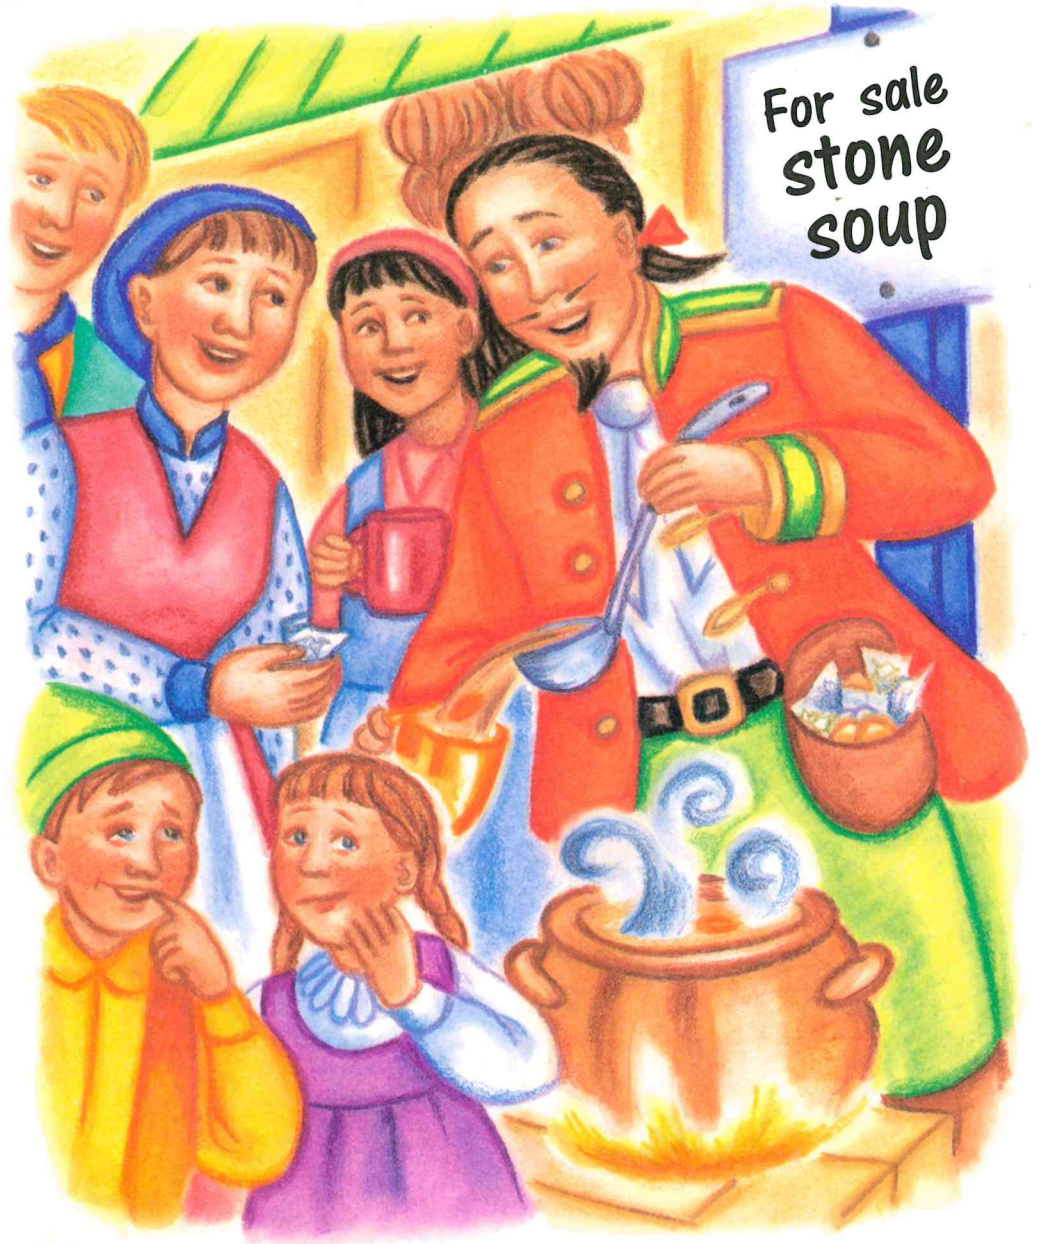

'Mmmmm!' he laughed.
'It's VERY, VERY good!'

'Come and buy some stone soup!'
he shouted.
